Omnis UK Bond Fund Investment Manager Market Review Quarter 1, 2018

The Fund was down slightly over the period. The sterling bond market weakened slightly over the quarter, while gilt yields rose in the first half of the period as strength in the global economy sparked fears that the current era of loose monetary policy could end sooner than had been envisaged. After a strong January, credit spreads widened in February as these fears finally impacted risk assets. In March, jitters about the potential for a global trade war saw spreads widen further, while gilt yields retraced some of their earlier rise. The Fund outperformed the index, aided by positive credit selection. Positions in GKN and Royal Bank of Scotland were especially beneficial here.

The UK gilt market remains underpinned by a relatively weak domestic economic environment. Inflation also seems to have peaked. Corporate earnings have been strong, though companies have typically been rewarding shareholders rather than shoring up their balance sheets. Credit spreads are also inside their long-run averages. Against this, monetary policy is tightening only gradually and strong demand for income without too much risk remains a powerful support for investment-grade corporate bonds. Given this background, the Fund retains a slight overweight in duration and a similarly modest overweight in credit risk.
